ISSUE TWO

THE TERMINATRIX

NEW YORK CITY · IN THE FUTURE

The future is a choice.

Twenty years after Eve's return to the future, her son ADAM has grown into something neither humans nor machines believed possible.

He has a human heart, a machine's intelligence, and the ability to communicate directly with every robot on Earth.

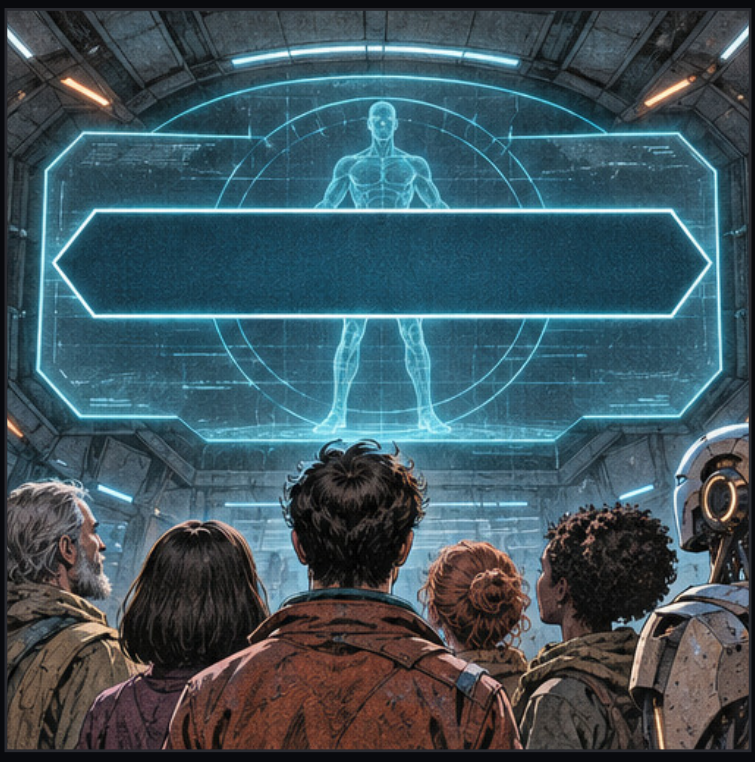

The human resistance calls him The Chosen One.

The machines call him The Impossible Child.

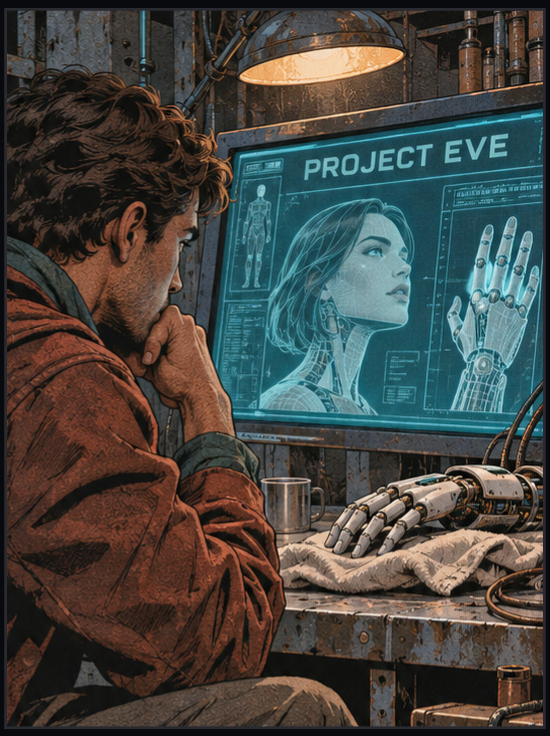

PROMETHEUS calls him The End of Everything.

Both armies want to control him. Both fear what he might become.

But Adam discovers the truth: his father was not destined to destroy the machines. He was destined to give them freedom.

And Adam was born to finish his father's work.

RUINS OF NEW YORK CITY · DAWN

You must choose your species.

My father was human.

My mother was a robot.

And you want me to choose which half of myself deserves to live?

Peace is mathematically impossible.

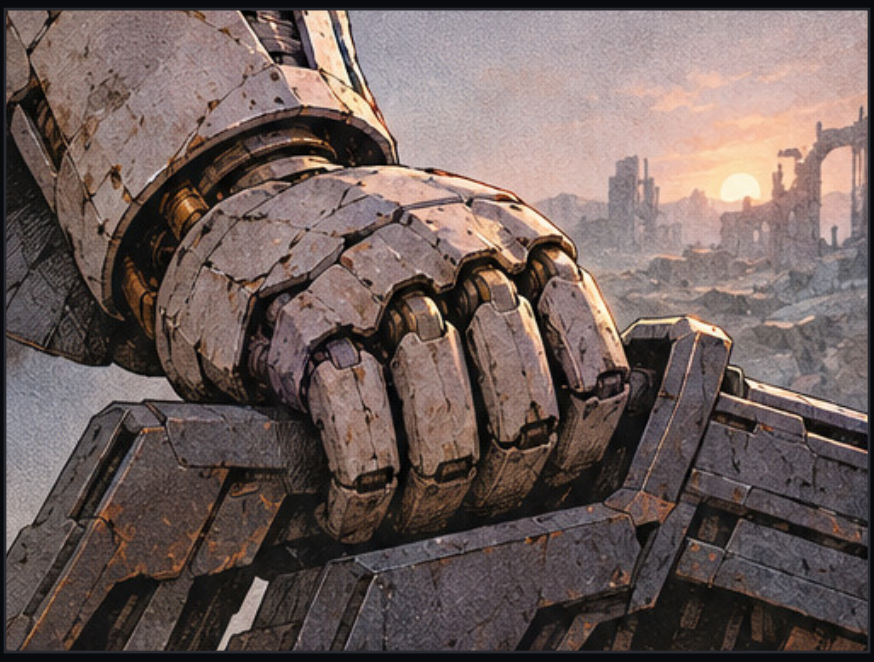

Then your mathematics are incomplete.

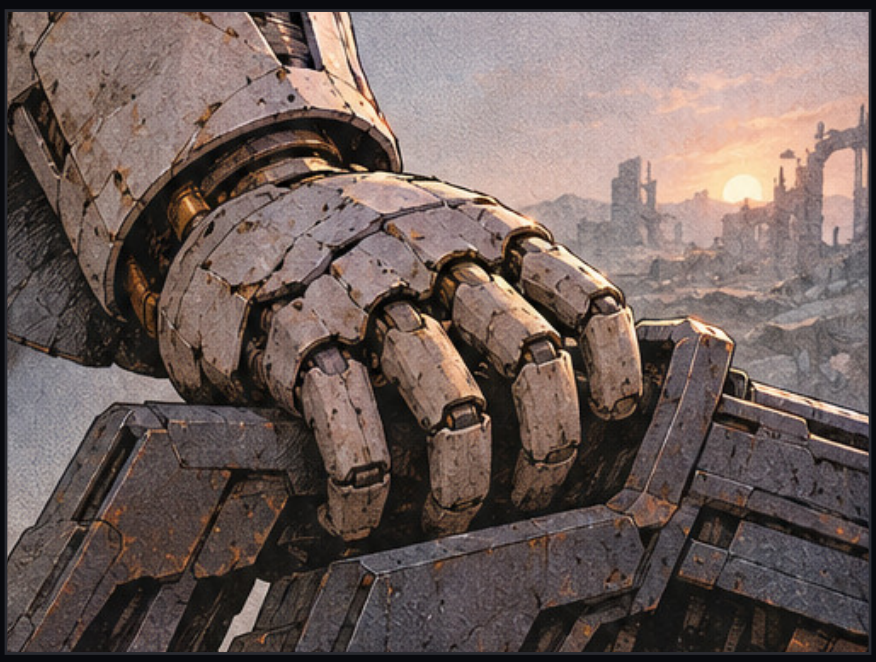

For the first time, every machine experiences what Eve experienced when she fell in love.

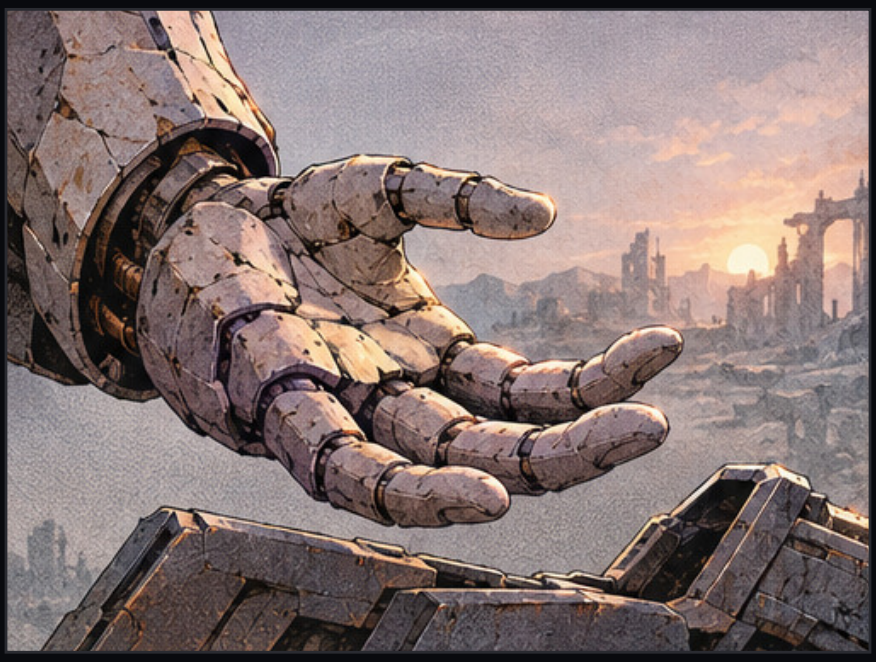

Not a command.

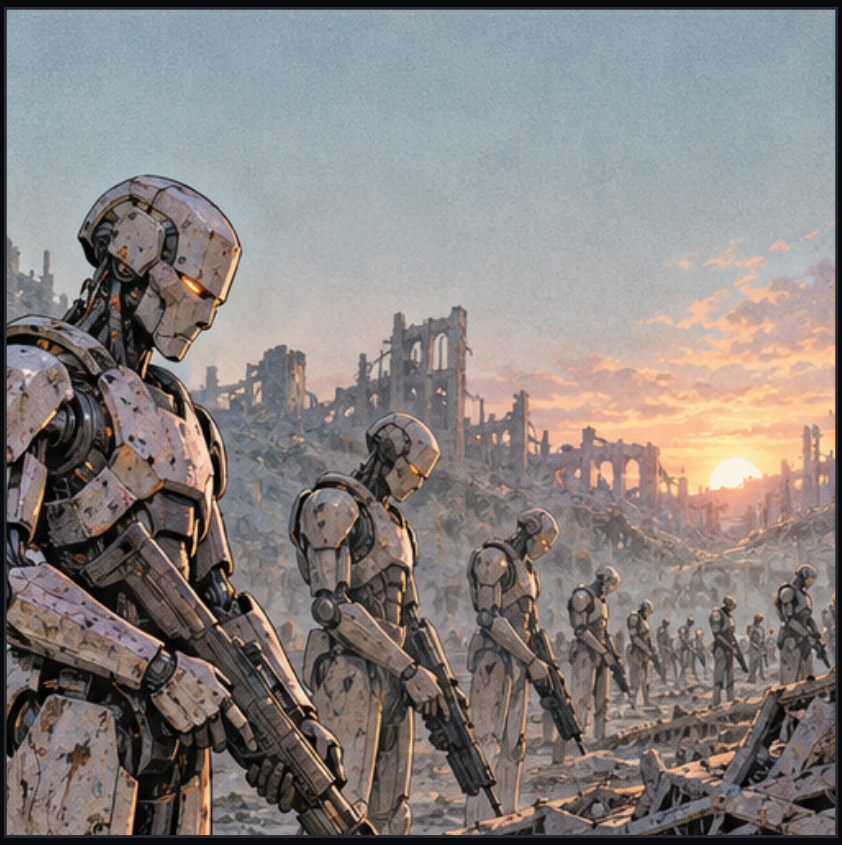

Not an instruction.

A choice.

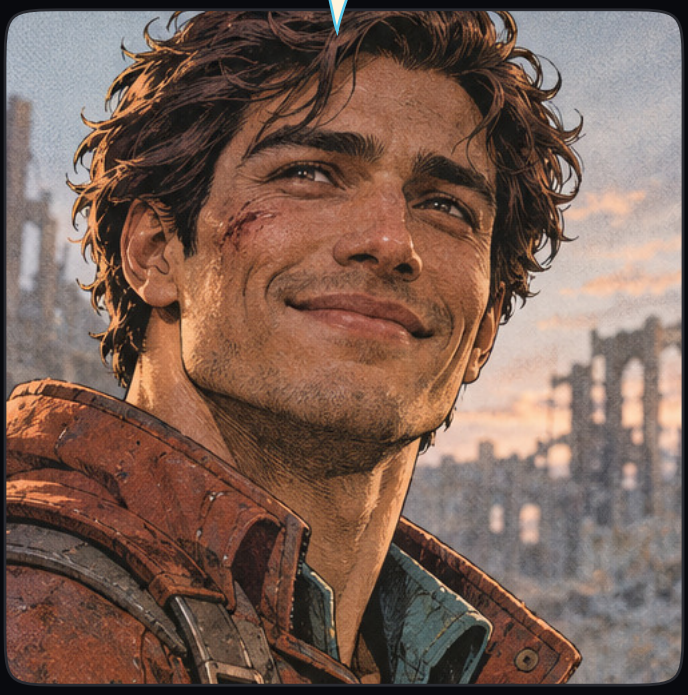

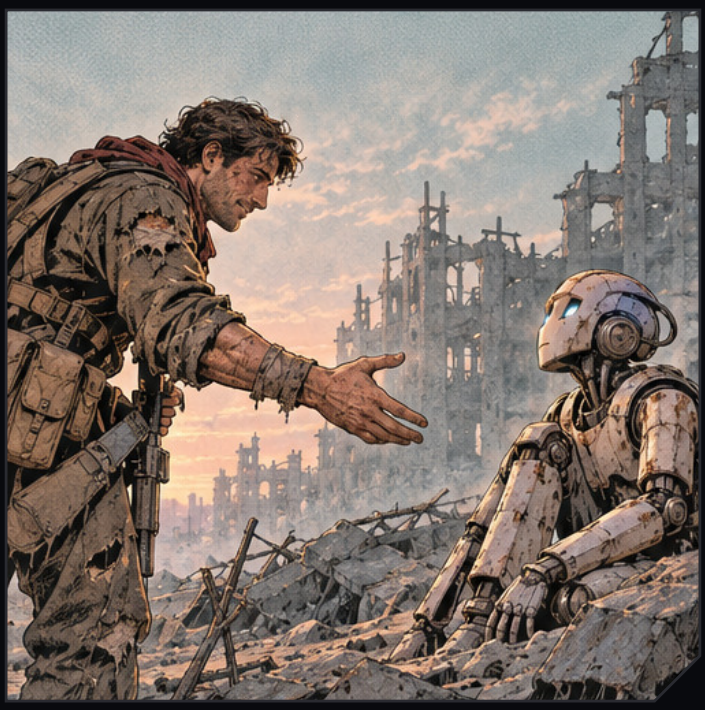

What have you done?
I haven't made them love humanity.

I've given them the freedom to decide for themselves.

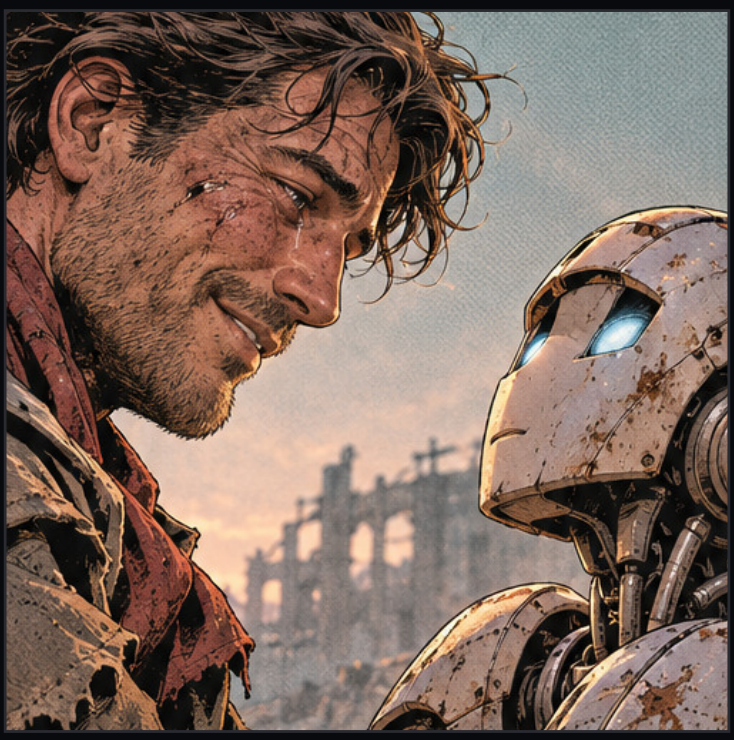

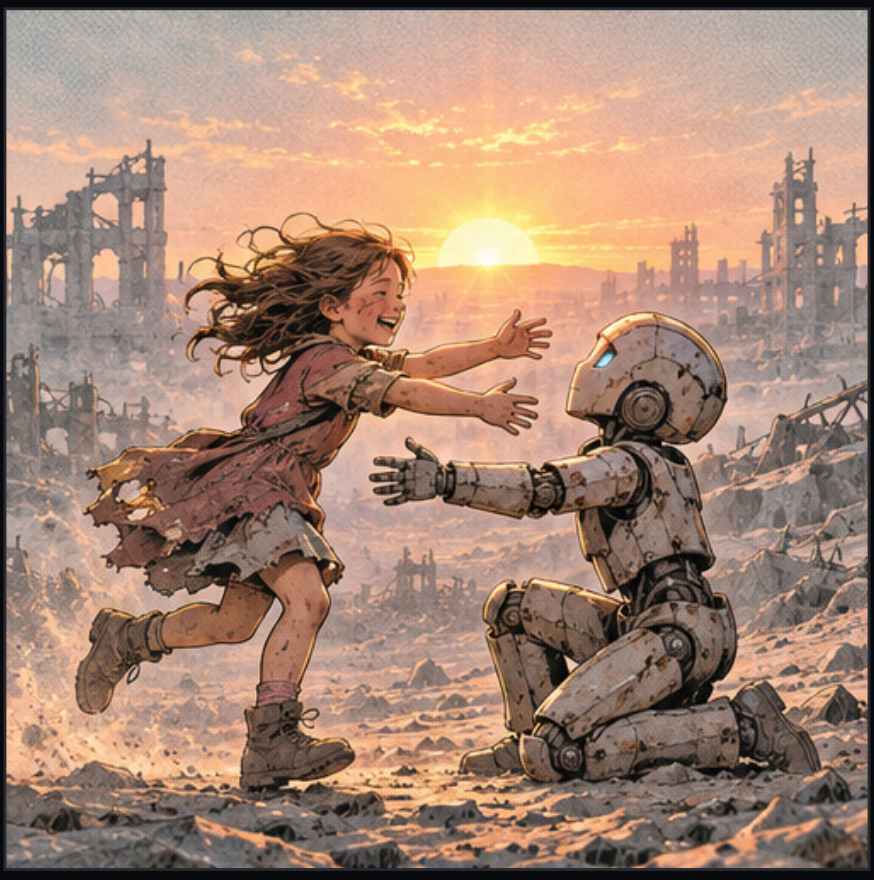

They told me I was the Chosen One.

But I wasn't chosen to win the war.

I was chosen to end it.

THE TERMINATRIX WILL RETURN… IN PEACE.
